The Right Hon. Mr Windham, on his marriage.

His Majesty was pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood on Colonel Bontien, lately returned from the West Indies, now Sir James Bontein.

Their Majeffies, and the Princesses Augusta and Elisabeth, came to town yesterday morning from Kew. On the King's arrival, he went to the Riding-house at Pimineo, arended by the Earl of Chesterseld and General Garth, to view the hories brought from the stud at Hanover, and the whole set of cream coloured and black horses. The finest of the three his Majesty or desert by he pamed Beauty to the not the old control of the old control. dered to be named Beauty; three of the old ones, the fame colour, were ordered to be call, as unfit for fervices one of which has drawn the King fiffour faddle hotfes are of different colours, one charger, one a chefinut, and the two others grey. The three black coach horses are reckoned the finest animals, but having been upwards of twenty days at fea, they are all very poor. The old ones, which are deemed unfit for fervice, are ordered to be shot, and not, as heretofore, fold.

The Princels Amelia's complaint in her knee is so painful as to prevent her Royal Highness from walking; preparations are making for the Princels going to Weymouth for the benefit of sea-bathing.

We are authentically informed that Lord Mulgrave has issued the following orders:—" It appears to his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief, that it might be of material service to the country in general, and at the same time a reasonable indulgence to the troops, to permit such of them as can with propriety be material from military duty, to be simployed by the farvess, his Royal Highness is pleased to permit, at the discretion of the Commanding Officers of the several regiments of the line, and of militia, and of sencible insantry, a certain number of their rank and file, not to extry, a certain number of their rank and file, not to exceed one third, to go on furlough for this purpofe—these furloughs will be granted for fix weeks."

The letters from Lord St Vincent's fleet by the Liston mail of Wednelday bring no news respecting Admiral Nelson. The crew of the Marlborough is still in rather a restractory state, and two or three more feamen have been hanged on board her. Some letter from Lifben of the 4th inft. state, that a courier had arrived there with advice of Admiral Nelson having made fome captures in the Mediterranean; but this news does not appear to be deserving of much credit, Government has, however, advices of Admiral Nel fon from another quarter, which may be confidered authentie. On the 16th, Admiral Nelson, Captain Trowbridge, and all the Captains of the fleet, dined with Sir William Hamilton at Naples. This gave rife to a very infolent remonstrance to the Court of Naples from M. Garat, the French Minister, who complained of this indecent proceeding. On the evening of the 16th, Admiral Nelson and all his officers went on board, and at break of day on the 17th, as was flated in the Paris Gazettes, the whole fleet failed towards Malta, where it was known that Buonaparte was; and that he would not fail from thence till the 19th. Admiral Nelson intended to pass through the Strait of Messina, which, though rather a dangerous navigation, he hoped to get through on the 18th. The distance from thence to Malta is not more than eighty leagues fo that there is now the belt reason to hope that Gene ral Buonaparte, as the French Gazettes affert he wishes will be able to meet with our British hero .- Star.

We are not surprised that under these circumstances which we believe we have very correctly stated, the French Directory should feel themselves a little uneasy nor can our Government be less anxious, for it is not improbable that on the face of the French expedition may depend the future movement of every Cabinet in

Sir John Shore, after accomplishing the object of his journey to Oude, is on his return to England. The principal articles of the treaty with the new Nabob, Sy. dut Ally, are, that he shall pay 20 lacks of additiona tribute to the Company; that is 70 lacks inflead of 50; that he shall furrender to them the port of Heliabad; and that he shall keep up another brigade of troops.—
We have no doubt but that there are other articles which may transpire in time. Sydut Ally is a remarkable character; he aims at the manners of an Englishman and has adopted even the drefs; he wears buckskin breeches and boots; and hunts, drinks, and gives din-ners in the European fathion. His obligations to the Company are infinite, and no doubt he will pay liberal his aggrandizement!

The negociation for the exchange of prisoners is a gain at an entire stand. So long since as the 25th of March, proposals were made to the French Government for a regular exchange, which were forwarded to France and it was expected that M. Niou would have brough some answer to them; instead of which, his memoria to the Transport Board takes no notice of our proposi tions, but goes to other points, which are confidered wholy inadmillible. And thus the matter refts.

We are likely to be again involved in new troubles from the runaway negroes that were in rebellion with the Maroons. They have possession of the provision-grounds of some of the citates, and have committed se-veral depredations. They are said to be armed, and provided with summinition, notwithstanding all the pre-cautions our Legislature have taken to prevent the sale of powder and arms to that description of people. These are the people that the Maroons, in their treaty with General Walpole, engaged to bring in with them, but which they failed to perform. A letter from Jeremie, dated the 3d inflant, men-tions that 700 brigands were killed and wounded at L'Arcahaye, by the troops under the command of General Maidand. The brigands about Jeremie are now perfectly quiet.

Extract of a letter from Jeremie, dated May 12. on going on thore found that every preparation was making to evacuate the place, the major part of the effects of the inhabitants being embarked by the 25th, and vessels daily arriving from all the parts of the island in our possession, to take what remained in their possession. fion, as also their persons; the countenance of those poor creatures now assumed a more pleasing appearance, they extolled General Maitland as the best, the bravest, and the most amiable man in the world, and great reason had they; feeing a certainty of protection, not only for themselves, but for every shilling of their property. The avaricious speculator was denied the opportunity of feizing on produce at half value, and the captains of neutral bottoms, who at first withed to make a hand of the moment, were foon convinced that the smallest act of injustice or impropriety would be severely punished. Many were ready, with large sums, to take advantage of the event, which, though long announced to the inhabitants, found those who were attached to the British little prepared; and, to the honour of our nation, not one of them have been fufferers. Every person who wished to come away was furnished with thipping, not only for themselves, but with every thing they could carry with them. The king's ftores were all embarked by the 28th, and the troops were ordered in from the out-posts, and were embarked on the 29th and 30th, and 1st May, just leaving a sufficient number to do duty until the entry of the enemy. At St Martin St Eustatius, Curacoa, Saba, and Surinam, the Dutch flag is flying jointly with the French, which has the precedency. It is difficult to conceive the number of prizes; that are made of English or American ships, bound to English settlements, which our privateers are constantly bringing into Guadaloupe, Porto Rico, St Domingo, &c. More than 300 of all fizes have been brought within the last five months into Guadaloupe alone. At Porto Rico, we have been equally fuccefsful. There are 120 privateers belonging to Guadaloupe, and all have made prizes."

> - COURT OF KING'S BENCH, TULY 17. THE KING V JOHNSON.

This profecution was brought by an information filed ex officio, by the Attorney-General, against the defendant, a bookfeller, in St Paul's Church-yard, for publishing Mr Wakefield's reply to the Bishop of Landaff.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL in opening the case, admitted that it was the indubitable right of the subjects of this free country, to discuss all political topics that might occur in a decent, temperate, and liberal manner. The present publication, however, so far from being of that description, was highly calumnious against every department of the British Government. The pamphlet of which this was an answer, treated of the finances of the country, the policy of perfevering in the war, and tome cemarks upon the state of Ireland. Mr Wakefield was certainly free to discuss these points with him, had he done fo in a manner not to give offence; but, on the contrary, belides the most severe animadversions on our public establishments, he represented this Government as one which was not worth contending for in case of an invation—that any change which might take place could not be injurious to the people, and inveighed in the firongest terms against all our civil and ecclessastical institutions. As long as those institutions deserved to be preserved, it would be the province of Courts of Juflice to protect them against attacks which struck at their very vitals. He concluded with reading several passes from the pamphlet, which he contended to be holtile to the peaceable administration of the government of these realms. Evidence was then produced, to prove the sale of this publication at the shop of the de-

Mr Erskins, in behalf of the defendant, addressed the Court and the Jury in a speech of very great length. In forming their opinion of the guilt or innocence of the intention, they were not to select particular passages, which, unconnected with the context, might admit of unfavourable interpretations; it was the business of the Jury to take the whole of the work collectively, and form their determination from the general tenor of its contents. That, in the publication before them, there were incautious and intemperate expressions he was ready to admit; but the verdict of the Jury must not rest upon that construction, which might be given to certain passages, when the whole collectively was found not to have an injurious tendency.-Nothing appeared to him in this work, exclusive of a few halty phrases, which were not authorised by that freedom of discussion which, having been allowed in this country, gave it a fuperiority over all other nations. The free dom of the press was the bulwark of the Constitution, and operated as a check upon the encroachments of ariflocracy on the one hand, and the turbulence and innovations of democracy and anarchy on the other. The tenor of the work would shew that the author wished to impress upon the public mind that our Ministers were fincere in the late negociation for peace, and circumstances undoubtedly were highly favourable to the fuppolition. But if the continuance of the war was confidered as a subject of popular complaint, the position that our Ministers wished to terminate it was by no means one which was likely to excite any discontent against against the Government. As far pamphlet respected the Ministers personally, or applied to their political characters, it could not be efteemed libellous; for if fuch discussions were not allowed, there was an, end to every species of free and impartial in The chief aim of the pamphlet feemed to be in endeavour to shew, that the removal of the present Minusters would be an indispensible preliminary to the union of all ranks of people against any invasion of the common enemy. In this opinion, he contended, that the author was not fingular; and, comparing the different passages of the book with each other, the result would be, that the writer only meant, by the best means that fuggested themselves to him, to promote spirit of union amongst the people. Having said so much in favour of the dispositions of the author, it was incumbent upon him further to observe, that whatever might be the disposition or designs of the author, no proof whatever had been brought of what was neceffendant.—Had he been aware that the matter was in any degree libellous, it was fair to infer that he would ot have published it; for as soon as he was apprized of its having been objected to, he did not hefitate a moment to suppress the publication. He therefore hoped the Jury would put the most favourable interpretation on the conduct of the prisoner, and keep in mind, that in general, political publications were not in the babis

Dr Fordyce and Dr Hayda were then called to the character of the defendant, and represented him as a man incapable of wilfully publishing a work of a tag cious, libellous, or feditious tendency.

The ATTORNEY CENERAL, in reply, read a number of passages from the book, in order to shew that its to dency was feditious and malignant. As to the oblers tion that the defendant was unacquainted with the parport and character of the writing, it was answered by incumerable precedents, in which the law held put thers answerable for the quality of any book they ax. posed to fale. They knew of this responsibility, and any man who circulated a book at random, acted funge.

Lord Kenyon in his charge took a view of the ge neral tenor of the pamphlet, from which he had no ha fitation to pronounce, even upon his oath, that it was every respect what the law must deem a libel. He too occasion here to notice a vulgar charge in this as we as many other pamphlets, that the means of corruption were enlarged by the increase of the peerage within the present reign. But any one who considered the increa led opulence of the country fince the days of Queen Elizabeth, would perceive that the increased scale of the peerage was no more than what was absolutely seceffary to preferve the requilite balance in our well poiled Conflitution.

The prefent book was unquestionably a libel upon the Government; and as in all focieties some species of Government. vernment must be preserved, and as no Government could exist unless supported by public opinion, any the which tended to divorce that opinion from the Gave-ment must be highly injurious. It was for the Jay-consider whether the pamphlet in question was calc ted to produce such an effect.

The Jury, after a few moments confultation, pronounced the defendant-Guilty.

EDINBURGH-JULY 24. IRELAND. HIGH TREASON.

SPECIAL COMMISSON, TUESDAY, JULY 17.
JOHN M'CANN was put upon his trial upon a cha of high treason. Thomas Reynolds, Efg. fewern, examined by the torney General.
Winnels had formerly been a religious of Dublis was a filk manufacturer, he believed the most extra five in Dublin; had acquired a confiderable property the county of Kildare, and lived in Kilkea-caltle in the county.—Witness has been an United Irishman; knows the prisoner; saw him at the house of Chi Bond; the prisoner resided as clerk with Mr Jackson Church-street, the iron founder.

Witness knew of the meeting of the 12th March at the house of Oliver Bond, when the prisoner was taken-he had conversations with the prisoner on the subject ness had been directed by the county meeting of Kildire as their treasurer, to attend a former meeting at Bond's house, and to apply to the prisoner, who would int duce him. Witness had gone to the prisoner floning before the 12th March, and asked him when and where the next provincial meeting would be held? Prisoner asked witness if he had his county returns (of men, arm money, and ammunition?) Witness faid he had M Cann then faid, he could not give information of the meeting until these returns were brought by witness to be laid before the provincial meeting.

On the Saturday after, winnels went to the county of Kildare to procure the returns, and called on Mr Day at Kilcullen, for them—he wrote copies of the return and gave them to M'Cann, who faid, that he could not then give witness information of the place and time of the provincial meeting, but would call on wineis of the next Sunday and tell him. Witness asked him to come to breakfast, which he did—this was Sunday the 11th of March, the day before the arrest at Bond's— Mrs Reynolds having left the room, McCann told with ness that the provincial meeting would be next day a Bond's, at eleven o'clock, aed defired witness to precise in his attendance, as business of very great confequence was expected.

Witness has heard M'Cann speak of Lord Edward Fitzgerald—not much though—remembers his faying that " he was a fine fellow and warm in the cause." Lord Edward did refide at the Black Rock, whe witness visited him-witness held the command of Co lonel of the Barony of Kilkea and Moone-he becar Colonel in this manner-Lord Edward called at his house in Park-street in November last-

[Here the prisoner's Counsel insisted that no conver fation with Lord Edward could be given in evidence > gainst the prisoner, when he was not prefent at it Crown Lawyers however infifted that having once prove Lord Edward and M'Cann to have been engaged in the fame treason, the words and acts of the one were to taken as the words and actions of both; to this Judges affented, and the examination continued.]

Lord Edward was an United Irishman: The prile er faid he was a fine fellow and warm in the cante witness has always understood from them that the care was the overthrow of the Constitution, &c.

Witness was appointed a Colonel through Lord Edward in November last. Lord Edward folicited him to become a Colonel for the barony of Kilkea and Moone-witness hesitated-witness had a property that barony-Lord Edward had one in the fa ty, about eight miles from the witness's-Lord Edward argued with witness, and persuaded him to accept it. Witness expressed doubts that the United Irishm could stand in battle before the King's troops Lord Edward replied " that this was not altogether necessary that a landing of the French was expec chosen Colonel and Treasurer.

After Lord Edward had applied to witness, and he had consented, witness met Oliver Bond— [Here prisoner's counsel objected to any evidence concerning Bond, who was not on his trial. Kenna came about the 15th of Feb. told witness that a county meeting would be held next Sunday at the 10 mile house witness went with him to the meet-ing; they then went to the election of a new delegate to the provincial meeting, and secretary and treasurer for the next three months. Mr Cummins of Kildare, was chosen secretary; a doubt arose as to the propriety of electing a new treasurer, out of respect to Lord Edward, the former treasurer, who was absent-but Cummans faying that he had directions from Lord Edward to fay, that being a marked man, he withed for a while an drop attending the meetings, and defired them to appoint a new treasurer for three months—witness was Michael Reynolds, of Naas, had acted in some ap pointment, he told witness that the provincial meeting would be held next day at Oliver Bond's, witness did failed with the witness.

About four o'clock on that day, witness called upon Lord Edward at Leinster-house witness had not a Lord Edward at Leinster-house witness had got a printed paper of orders from Capt. Saurin to the Lawer's infantry, directing them to repair to Smithfield case of alarm, to apply to him for ball-cartridge and cafe of alarm, to apply to him for ball-carridge— and if obliged to leave town, to deposit their arms at his stoufe for safety," and enclosing an injunction on a-mother piece of paper, " to keep those orders secret." Witness shewed this paper to Lord Edward, who seemed greatly agitated on reading it, and said, "he thought Government intended to arrest him, and that he wished Government intended to arreft him, and that he withed he could get off to France to haften the invasion, which he could do by his intimacy with Talleyrand Perigord, one of the French Ministry;" he faid, "he would not approve of a general invasion at first, but the the French had some fine fast-sailing frigates, on board which he would put as many English and Irish officers as he could would put as many English and Irish officers as he could procure to come from France, and as many persons capable of drilling men as he could get, with stores, amunition, and military, and run these into some port in this kingdom—he thought Wexford, as the most likely to be unsufpected—and being amongst their friends; if this succeeded, he could establish a rallying-point until other help should come."
Witness has heard that M'Cann was taken at Bond's;

the officers taken there made a number of vacancies. Witness faw Lord Edward the Wednesday after in his place of concealment in Aungier-Itreet, who bid him come to him the next night, which he did; Lord Edward faid he had money as treaturer of the county of Kildare, and also as treaturer of the barony of Ophaley; that he would have these sums settled. He gave witness paper, which he defired him to give to the county tommittee, as his address to them—" not to think any ng of what had paffed; it was a trifle; that the hould fill up their vacancies as speedily as possible; that they would be very soon called upon; and that they hight rely upon his being in his place in the day of seed." In consequence of this a new election took "Slace in the room of Cummins & Michael Reynolds was Witness first disclosed the United Irishmens business to Mr William Cope; witness had mortgaged a property to him for 5000l, and on the death of the late Sir Duke Gifford, they went together to Callle Jordan, to take poffession of it; they dided there—Lord Wycombe and ther perform were prefent, and the conversation ran on general politics; returning to town next day, Mr Cope renewed the subject of politics, and represented in firing colours the horror of a revolution—the murders, robberies and devastations—the overthrow of all religion— Covernment—property, of everything sear and dear to deferiment—property, of everything sear and dear to man, in such a way that witness was shocked at the description. Witness then told Mr Cope that he believed he knew a person who was not sanguinary, and did not wish for murder, who would desert the United Trillinen, and to make amends for any crime he had committed in being one of them, would give Government such information as he possessed was very considerable.

Mr Cope terzed on this, and faid that fuch a man would be and ought to be placed higher in the country than any man that ever was in it—witness told him neither honours har rewards would be defired or accepted if this man came forward, and that he, the witness, would call upon him in two or three days on the subjects and her is being the subjects and her is being the subjects.

Witness did call, and faid he had feen his friend, and prevailed on him to come forward on certain conditions and that he had confiderable information to give—Mr Cope faid the man ought to have greater conditions athan he could with for, afeat in Parliament and 100pl. a year; witness replied, that the conditions were misoderflood—that all that was required was that the person should not be prosecuted himself, or be forced to prosecute any other person, and that the channel of information should be kept a complete secret; and that as the person would be in danger of affassination if the thing transpired, he would be obliged to leave the country for a time, and therefore required that his extraorand that he had confiderable information to give-Mr try for a time, and therefore required that his extraor-dinary expences should be paid. Mr Cope desired to know what they would be? Witness faid, a liberty to draw on him for any fum under 500 guineas would be required. Mr Cope prefied greater rewards, and expressed his surprise that they should be resuled; at tenigth he acquiesced, and received the information which wines gave him as from another person.

Witness told Mr Cope of the meeting at Bond's.

Witness has incurred losses to the amount of Sool, and has received 500 guineas. He never told any one even his wife, of his communication with Mr Cope.

Witness went afterwards to Kilken, attended one county meeting, and one meeting of Captains—thortly after Kennan came to him and told him it was faid he was the man who betrayed the meeting at Bond's on the 16th April ... The del gate of the barony of Narra and Rheban, came to him and faid, he (witness) must attend at the county meeting at Bell's on the Curragh, to fland his trial on accusations brought from Dublin from the provincial meeting by M. Reynolds, for ha

Witness had before determined to quit the county, day. Captain Erstine and a party of the oth deagons came to live at free quarters at Kilkea, and put witness under arrest—they staid eight or ten days—after they lest him, witness set out for Dublin—at Naas, he met Mr. Taylor of Athy, who told him he had intended to write or come to witness to let him know that he (witness) was the public talk of Dublin, as the person who had betruyed the meeting at Bond's, and that if he went there he would be sourdered, and the house in which he was, pulled down—witness went back to his own house, and next morning as he stood at the post-office in Castle Dermot, he was arrested by a parry of the oth dragoons, and sent to Athy goal on informathe 9th dragoons, and fent to Athy goal on informa-tion fworn against him by one of his own Captains.

Witness dues not suppose that Government knew him to be the person giving information, for he defired Mr Cors not to mention his name, and he has reason to believe that even Mr C. did not know that the inrmation came from the witness himself.

Croft examined by Mr Curran, faid he was married to a Miss Witherington in 1704—knows a charge was made against him by his mother, for having a sceleton key to an iron cheft, where the kept her papers-ac knowledges he stole some trinkets to give to a girl, but denies having a skeleton key—his mother-in-law lived at his house—previous to her death he administered some medicines to relieve her of a pain in her stomach—this was on a Friday, and she died the following Sunday, he mad her acol. A few days before her Sunday—he paid her 3001, a few days before her death, and it was not to be found after her death; he never was charged to his face with taking the money but believes Capt. Witherington capable of faying un-kind things of him. She meant to purchase a com-mission for her son Edward. Knows Mrs Cahill, on remation for her fon Edward. Knows Mrs Cahril, on renewing a bond to her, gave an old bond by miltake in place of the new one. He afterwards took back this bond, and gave Mrs Cahill notes for it. The fictitious bond he burnt 15 days ago. He had taken the oath of allegiance, and afterwards the United Irithman's oath.
He knew the extent of the defign of both parties at the time. The one was to destroy the Government and Constitution.—Took both the oaths with an intent to Keep both.

WM. Bellingham Swan, Esq. identified the prisoner, whom he saw on the 12th of March Lass, at the house of O. Bond, in Bridge-street. Discovered him with 13 or 14 more in company in a back room. He saw the prisoner with the words newly written on the paper, "I. A. B. do solemnly declare that I have been duly elected."

At the foot of No. 2. were certain refolutions, which appeared, as stated by the certain refolutions, which appeared, as flated by the Solicitor General, to have been formed on the very night (Feb. 19. 1798) when the Earl of Moira moved the question in the Hose of Lords to enquire into the cause of the distracted state of this kingdom.—The resolutions can be follow:

the queftion in the House of Lords to enquire into the cause of the distracted state of this kingdom.—The resolutions ran as follow:

"Resolved. That we will pay no attention to any measure which the Parliamene of this kingdom may adopt to divert the public mind from the grand object we have in view, as nothing less than a complete consensipation of our country can fatisfy us.

"Resolved. That it is the opinion of this Committee, that if the other provinces be in the same state of forwardness, as to men, arms. &c. as Leinsler, as soon as we can obtain information thereof, we will immediately proceed to act, and that the Executive be requested to take such measures as shall bring about a union of the provinces.

Another Resolution, was "That the Committee of Five do prepare a military test to be laid before the Provincials at their next meeting."

Another Resolution recommended the appointment of an Adjutant General from three others from each regiment, whose names should be fent into the Executive Directory by their respective Colorels, and the proper officer for that appointment to be from thence selected by the Directory.

Another resolution went to order 40 guineas to purchase a horse for a delegate to be sent with orders from the Executive. In Another resolution went to request the Executive to account for a sum of 60 guineas, with which they were chargeable.
